Measure your room dimensions

Take a few measurements in each area so nothing important is missed.

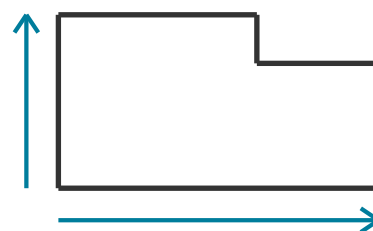

1 Draw the basic shape of the room

Sketch the room from above. Include any alcoves, recesses or unusual wall shapes.

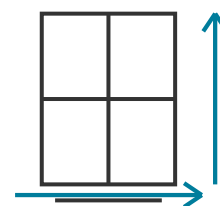

2 Measure every wall

Measure each wall at the top, middle and bottom. Rooms are not always perfectly square, so recording more than one measurement helps identify any variation.

3 Measure doors and windows

Include the frames and note their position from adjacent walls and the floor. If skirting boards are fitted, measure from skirting to skirting.

Tip

Write measurements directly onto your sketch as you go. This makes it much easier to compare your room against product dimensions later.

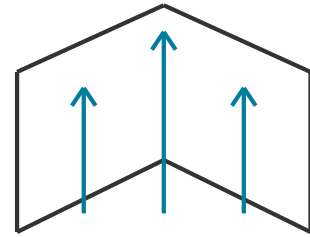

Complete your room sketch

Add height, services and fixed obstructions before checking which bed will fit.

4

Measure the ceiling height

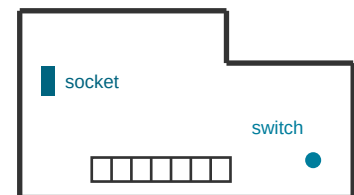

Measure the ceiling in at least three different places to check whether it is level, then add those heights to your plan.

5

Mark sockets, switches and radiators

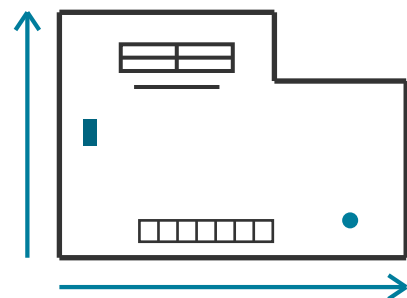

Show the position of electrical sockets, light switches and radiators, including their approximate width or size.

6

Check the finished plan

Your sketch should now show the room shape, key dimensions, ceiling height, doors, windows and fixed services. Use the relevant product size and specification guide to check what will fit.

Need help?

If you are unsure which model suits the room, send your measurements or sketch to the Hideaway Beds team and we can help you interpret the available space.
